

Vice-Chair

Vicki Taylor Lee, AICP

My name is Vicki Taylor Lee and I am the Zoning Administrator for Cherokee County Georgia.

My vision for the Planning and Women Division of the American Planning Association involves more visibility and participation at the state and the national levels. Our division is in an exceptional position to influence the relationship of planning to women and their ever changing roles in society. One of the goals of our division is to identify and highlight women planners. This endeavor not only recognizes leaders in our field, it encourages current and future women planners to expand their expertise. This is vital and highly productive at all levels.

The electronic newsletter is an important tool at both the state and national level. We should target women American Planning Association members for recognition, networking and exchange of knowledge. This newsletter should have a priority with our division and be published quarterly at a minimum.

I am an ardent supporter of planning and zoning and its importance for quality development in our world. I am a member of the Professional Development Committee of the Georgia Planning Association and support a continuing education requirement for AICP members. I believe I am distinctively qualified to serve you as Vice-Chairman.

My thirty years of experience in the planning and zoning field has given me a unique perspective on our changing profession. I have experience in coordination and management of projects from small to multi-million dollar developments. I have been involved with budget preparation and administration for facilities, departments and construction projects.

I was elected as Vice-Chairman of the Planning and Women Division in April 2007 and served as Session Organizer for our two by-right sessions at the 2008 APA Conference where one had the highest attendance of all sessions presented. I have greatly enjoyed my time with the Division and am proud of what we have accomplished in the past 20 months, but we have more to do and I stand ready to work for you and our Division.

Thank you for your consideration.
